Alex the Reindeer was different than the other reindeer in his native country of Liechtenstein. He was a white and black blend, one side of him was white as snow, the other was as black as night. His fellow reindeer didn't think a two-tone reindeer would be right, so they banished him. But, there were other things about Alex that made it hard for him to fit in. He had shiny gold antlers that were especially bright. They lit up the dark and gave off sparkling gold dust when he was enthusiastic.

On Christmas Eve, as Santa and his team are flying across Europe, they can't find Liechtenstein. There aren't any lights because soon fireworks will go off to celebrate the country's 300-year anniversary. Santa's reindeer want him to keep going. After all, even though it's a beautiful alpine paradise, Liechtenstein is tiny, and they are afraid that Santa is going to miss his deadline to deliver to children on every continent.

But Santa has absolutely no intention of missing a country on the gift-giving night of Christmas Eve! He parachutes down and in the process he meets Alex. And, as you'll discover when you read the story, that's when things begin to change for the better and soon give happy results for everyone—Alex, Santa's team, and children around the world. This delightful, rhyming, Christmas story presents children with a lifelong gift, a golden solution for what they should do when they feel they don't fit in.
