Selected Travel Writings

Stevenson's travel writings encompass a vast range of topics, from his journeys through Europe to his adventures in the South Seas. One of his most famous works is "Travels with a Donkey in the Cévennes," which chronicles his 12-day hike through the mountains of central France accompanied only by a donkey named Modestine. This travelogue captures Stevenson's wit, observations, and encounters with locals, providing readers with a delightful blend of adventure and cultural exploration.

Exploring the South Seas

Stevenson's fascination with the South Seas led him to embark on numerous voyages, where he discovered the beauty and mystique of tropical islands. In his book "In the South Seas," Stevenson shares his experiences during his time in the Pacific, offering readers a unique perspective on the people, cultures, and landscapes he encountered. From encounters with cannibals to immersing himself in the local customs, Stevenson's vivid descriptions transport readers to another world, igniting a sense of wanderlust and curiosity.

Enjoy the European Charm

In addition to his explorations in the South Seas, Stevenson's European journeys also left a lasting impact on his writings. "An Inland Voyage" recounts his canoe trip through Belgium and France, navigating rivers and canals while discovering hidden gems along the way. This intimate travelogue showcases Stevenson's ability to capture the essence of a place, illuminating the beauty and character of the European landscapes he encountered.

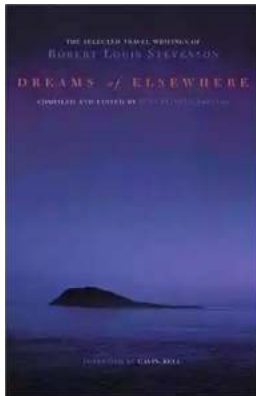

Why Stevenson's Writings Still Resonate Today

The enduring allure of Stevenson's travel writings lies in his ability to captivate readers with his storytelling skills. His ability to blend adventure, humor, and keen observations of the world around him creates a captivating narrative that transcends time. Stevenson's works not only provide readers with an immersive experience but also serve as a source of inspiration for those seeking to embark on their own travel adventures.

Inspired Travelers' Tales

Stevenson's influence on travel writing is profound, inspiring countless aspiring writers to document their own journeys and experiences. Best known for his fiction writing, Robert Louis Stevenson was also an essayist, journalist, poet and travel writer. His first major work was An Inland Voyage, an account of his journey by canoe from Antwerp to northern France. The companion work to this, Travels with a Donkey in the Cevennes (1879), is widely regarded as a travel-writing classic. June Skinner Sawyers has brought together the most comprehensive and representative sampling of Robert Louis Stevenson's prolific travel output, including excerpts from his most famous travel books, travel essays and travel poetry. The result is a collection that is as vivid and compelling as his fiction, and includes a number of lesser-known works from US collections. There are endlessly fascinating portraits of flesh-and-blood human beings, and it becomes apparent that he never grew tired of meeting new people, or of seeking new adventures. The story-teller always finds stories to tell and Stevenson was a consummate storyteller. In the tranquility of a French pine forest by moonlight he considers the importance of friendship; in a leper colony on Hawaii he reflects on physical horror and moral beauty; in all of his writing there is humanity and compassion. Dreams of Elsewhere also features annotated listings of Stevenson historic sites, landmarks, museums, libraries, organisations, and even music inspired by Stevenson. As Gavin Bell, the critically acclaimed travel writer, states in his foreword: 'Admirers of RLS's work will welcome this judicious selection of sketches from an itinerant life. Those less familiar with his blythe spirit are in for a rare treat, a voyage of discovery with the teller of tales to where the surf murmurs on Parrot islands.'
