Preservation Through Photography

Photography has long been recognized as a powerful tool for preserving history. Each photo is a tangible representation of a moment in time, capturing not only the physical appearance of a place but also the emotions and stories associated with it. By documenting Ontario's historical sites and heritage, we create a visual archive that future generations can explore and learn from.

One of the challenges in preserving history is the inevitability of change. Buildings crumble, landscapes transform, and memories fade. However, through the lens of a camera, we freeze these fleeting moments and immortalize them forever. By capturing the intricate details, the textures, and the nuances that make each site unique, we ensure that the essence of Ontario's history is not lost to time.

Moreover, photography can serve as a valuable educational resource. By sharing our images and stories through various platforms, we spark curiosity and engage others in the exploration of our collective past. Photos have a way of transporting people to a different time and place, allowing them to connect with history in a personal and meaningful way.

Cruising Ontario 91: A Photographer's Paradise

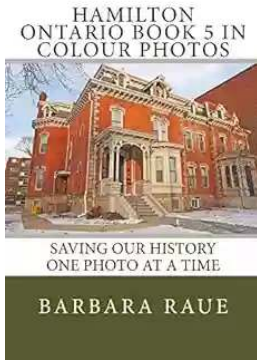

One of the most iconic routes for photographers in Ontario is Highway 91. Stretching across scenic locations, this route takes us on a journey through the heart of the province's history. From picturesque towns to breathtaking landscapes, cruising on Highway 91 presents an abundance of opportunities to capture the essence of Ontario's past.

As we embark on this photographic adventure, various historical landmarks and attractions grace our path. For instance, the picturesque Cambridge Butterfly Conservatory is a prime spot to capture the beauty of nature while tracing the province's development. Similarly, the Dundurn Castle in Hamilton allows us to immerse ourselves in the opulence of the Victorian era while learning about the region's industrial heritage.

As photographers, it is not just the landmark sites that grab our attention. The fleeting moments on the road, the charming roadside diners, and the heartwarming encounters with locals all contribute to the story we document. By taking the path less traveled and seeking out the hidden treasures, we unveil a side of Ontario's history that may have otherwise gone unnoticed.

John Ryckman, born in Barton township (where present day downtown Hamilton is), described the area in 1803 as he remembered it: "The city in 1803 was all forest. The shores of the bay were difficult to reach or see because they were hidden by a thick, almost impenetrable mass of trees and undergrowth... Bears ate pigs, so settlers warred on bears. Wolves gobbled sheep and geese, so they hunted and trapped wolves. They also held organized raids on rattlesnakes on the mountainside. There was plenty of game. Many a time have I seen a deer jump the fence into my back yard, and there were millions of pigeons which we clubbed as they flew low."

Hamilton, the centre of a densely populated and industrialized region, is located in Southern Ontario on the western part of Lake Ontario. Hamilton Harbour marks the northern limit of the city, and the Niagara Escarpment runs through the middle of the city bisecting it into "upper" and "lower" parts. There are over one hundred waterfalls and cascades within the city, most of which are on or near the Bruce Trail as it winds through the Niagara Escarpment.

Two steel manufacturing companies, Stelco and Dofasco, were formed in 1910 and 1912, and Procter & Gamble opened a manufacturing plant in 1914. McMaster University moved from Toronto to Hamilton, an airport was built in 1940, a Studebaker assembly line started in 1948, the Burlington Bay Skyway Bridge was built in 1958, and the first Tim Horton's store opened in 1964. On January 1, 2001, the new City of Hamilton was formed through the amalgamation of the former city and the six municipalities of Stoney Creek, Glanbrook, Ancaster, Dundas, and Flamborough. We have lived in Hamilton for more than 40 years; it is here that we raised our three children.
