This book is the syncretic journey of a martial energetic adept. It is also a treatise for acquiring a powerful discipline of applied, stilling and moving, meditation in the practice of combatives. The most powerful practices involve breath control and submission fighting. The power of the content rests in the revelation of mental, physical and emotional powers. The powers that control violence within and without oneself. These powers were gained from overcoming setbacks in the effort to enhance modal behavior. The results of the endeavor brings a black man back to his African roots through a practice that can be called Kabula Engolo Jujizu. This book is the third telling the tale as to how others desiring to follow a similar path can do so through a measurable, observable and replicable manner. Kalunga Engolo Jujizu, stated in short Jujizu, is a Stilling and Moving, martial energetic meditation practice. It is this and more. In fact it is much, much more!!! It is something to practice religiously. It is a practice of skill in personal improvement, self awareness and humility leading to a faith described as Ubuntu, the actualization of compassion. These practices help us pass through the Bardo and enter flow states. The idea of Bardo is presented in applied theory throughout the book. A Bardo is a period of mental unrest, physical uncertainty and emotional frustration. It is associated with the Bantu concept of change, called Kalunga, because after negotiating this part of life, what is a burden is sloughed off like dead skin, spit out like excess flem, expelled like exhaled air. Make light your vessel and free yourself from burden... everything on the breath and we rise!!! Bardo is the 31 event of change after the end of one person, place or thing and before the completion of newness that comes as a result of changes in mind, body and spirit.
