Young Azubuiké is a survivor. Countless generations have passed since the fracture, and subsequent collapse, of the Meroan Republic. Yet remnants of their culture and technology continue to persist on various worlds that have been conquered by their enemies. Subjugated and oppressed, the descendants of this once great republic know they must change the direction of their fate or face extinction.

On a dangerous run to scavenge supplies from a remote excavation site located in an isolated section of the Meza ruins, Azubuiké and his friends encounter a unique piece of technology left behind by their ancestors. Once exposed to it, the device begins to alter Azubuiké's reality in ways that could, ultimately, unravel his mind. There is no way for the group to know the danger, or benefit, posed by this ancient technology even though it has already set in motion a series of events that will forever change the lives of Azubuiké and his friends. Has he just unlocked the secret to ending the alien occupation of his world? Or will it bring about the final destruction of his people?
