One of Enfield's most memorable encounters was stumbling upon a hidden gem in the south of France. Tucked away amidst rolling vineyards, he discovered a charming village untouched by time. The locals regaled him with captivating stories of their ancestors, weaving a tale of courage, love, and resilience.

Chapter 2: Traversing the Mystic Orient

Never one to remain content with European discoveries, Edward Enfield turned his attention towards the far eastern lands. Venturing across deserts and mountain ranges, he immersed himself in the mystical cultures and traditions of the Orient.

One fateful night, Enfield found himself camping under a starlit sky in the depths of the Arabian desert. Mesmerized by the celestial display above, he gazed upon the heavens, feeling a profound sense of interconnectedness with the universe and the people who dwell within it.

Chapter 3: Unearthing Ancient Civilizations

A thirst for knowledge and a passion for history propelled Edward Enfield towards unearthing the remnants of ancient civilizations. From the ruins of Machu Picchu in Peru to the mystical temples of Angkor Wat in Cambodia, Enfield unraveled the mysteries of these long-lost worlds.

During his expedition in Egypt, he miraculously stumbled upon an undiscovered chamber within the Great Pyramid of Giza. The hieroglyphics adorning its walls revealed secrets long forgotten, offering a glimpse into the enigmatic lives of the pharaohs.

Chapter 4: Embracing the Unknown

The final chapter of Edward Enfield's early adventures takes us to the farthest corners of our planet where unexplored territories await. From the frozen wonders of Antarctica to the remote rainforests of the Amazon, Enfield's life was a testament to the unyielding spirit of human exploration.

During an expedition deep into the heart of the Amazon rainforest, Enfield encountered a tribe previously unseen by the outside world. Their ancient traditions and harmonious connection with nature left an indelible mark on his soul, reminding him of the fragility and beauty of our planet.

The early adventures of Edward Enfield are a chronicle of courage, curiosity, and compassion. His indomitable spirit and insatiable thirst for discovering the unknown continue to inspire countless adventurers around the globe.

A charming and humorous book about a boy becoming a man in the Far East during the 1950s.

When Edward Enfield was a lad, he was put on a ship and sent to Canada to avoid the Blitz. After three years in Ottawa, he returned to England and was sent off to boarding school. From there he entered Oxford and began his National Service.

While vowing he did not want to work a job that took him away from England, he was hired by a shipping company and sent to Asia, where he got married, became an avid horseman, and discovered a hatred for sailing.

Not bad for a man famous among his service friends for not being able to read a map.

Part travelogue, part memoir, An Eastern Odyssey: The Adventures of Edward Enfield is a love letter to a way of life that has disappeared, and an elegy to a good life lived.

All by a man who was once described as looking like a moth eaten ferret.

Praise for Edward Enfield

'He writes with a dry wit which had me laugh out loud' - The Oxford Times

Edward Enfield, father of famous comedian Harry Enfield, is the author of several charming and comic books about cycling, travelling, gardening and growing old. His books include Downhill All the Way, Greece on My Wheels, Dawdling Down the Danube and Old Age and How to Survive It. Rick Stein's TV series From Venice to Istanbul was inspired by Enfield's Greece on My Wheels.
