Do you and your child love autumn, pumpkins, and going to pumpkin patches? If so, you will love this book. This is a charming little rhyming story about a farmer who was very lonely and wanted some company. He planted some pumpkin seeds that grew into a little family for him to love. He wanted it to last forever, but he knew they would eventually rot and he would be sad and lonely again. Then the farmer remembered that pumpkins have seeds and can be planted again. His little pumpkin family would return to him the next year! This cute story teaches children that all good things must end, but eventually something else that is equally good will come to take its place.
