I don't like peas;
I don't like beans;
I don't like squash
Or other greens.
Instead I'd like
Some cake and pie,
A cone with ice cream
Stacked sky-high.
It seems that when
You're hungriest,
You'd eat the foods
You like the best.
So pass the sprinkles,
If you please,
And pass the pie,
But keep your peas.

Srinika Ganguly is a poet, writer and illustrator. She is all of 10 years and believes very firmly in making lemonade when presented with lemons. During the enforced pandemic induced home schooling phase, she joined Girls Club a Future Learner K12 (FLK12) initiative. This programme mentors young writers and poets and provides community support to them. Under the stewardship of Mrs. Shaon Mitra -Director FLK12 this programme helps Primary and Middle School children to hone and polish their English LSRW (Listening, Speaking, Reading and Writing) skills. Children of this age group are open and fearless and can accept their failures with alacrity- thus ensuring that the rise in their learning curve is both steep and meteoric.

Like other members of the FLK12 Srinika has been proactively engaged in writing poetry for the past 18 months. Being in the company of other writers has boosted her creative writing skills and given her the confidence to write.

"Poems Of My Heart" is her first published work. She started writing fan fiction when she was 5 years old. Like other girls of her age she was enamoured by all Disney princesses and of course the colour pink! Some of those preferences are reflected in her poems. Besides writing rhymed quartets, free verse and Haiku she is also working on writing original parables and allegories. We are also happy to share that the cover design and all illustrations in the book have been created by Srinika. Now that she is a published writer, she wants to encourage her friends to try their hand at writing.

The team at Future Learner K12 is proud to be part of yet another growth story. Without further ado it is our pleasure to introduce the debutante writer and illustrator par excellence for this quarter - Srinika Ganguly to all our readers.
